8th August 2017 Issue 31.2017 Year 15

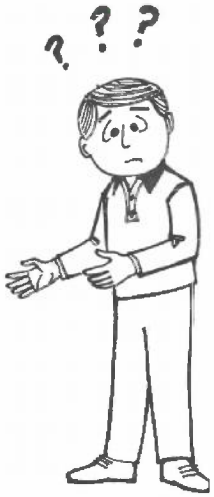
Is there an election soon? Politicians are invading our coffee shops!
Good to see them genuinely interested in local issues and giving us a chance to hear their policies and for them to listen to our concerns and hopes for our region.

One minor problem – seems that when we do have a local issue that needs their action, we find out just how the bureaucratic system intervenes and stifles any attempts to resolve them.



Case in point: You may have noticed some roadside mowing and tree demolition along Tasman Highway - our Great Eastern Drive. The tree 'trimming' is particularly noticeable. The result is something to behold – like someone's been cutting down trees with a shotgun!
A landowner forwarded a complaint to the Department of State Growth. This is the big department that contains the little department responsible for our State Roads. The complaint concerned the trimming contractors dumping the tree limbs and trimmings into the landowners property without permission. The complaint was a request to the Department responsible for roadside maintenance (it was DIER but is now called Transport Tasmania) and a copy of the complaint was sent to the office of the Minister for State Growth (Matthew Groom MP). The landowner asked for the matter to be resolved quickly as the mess could pose a potential fire hazard and traffic hazard on the very busy highway.

That's when the left hand went AWOL and the right hand went numb.

Minister Groom's office efficiently and promptly replied to the request, notifying the landowner that they had forwarded the request to Minister responsible. But wait - wasn't that Minister Groom? Well, it seems that is not the case.
Turns out that, just because Matthew Groom MP is the Minister for State Growth, and State Road maintenance is a function of Transport Tasmania which is under the Department of State Growth, the State Roads are under the control of the other Minister in the same department - but a different one! But the different department is still within the State Growth Department.

Then it became clear – the left hand knew what to do and the right hand was doing the work but the left hand didn't tell anyone there was a right hand until it was in the wrong hand – or the left hand didn't know …. Oh, forget it.

Well, it has all been resolved. Here is a paraphrased explanation kindly provided by the office of Matthew Groom - the real Minister for Growth.

"The matter raised is indeed a Transport Department matter and as such has been referred to the Minister for Infrastructure……. " (Turns out the Ministry of Infrastructure is in the Ministry for State Growth).
"…… Minister Groom is Minister for State Growth and is one of several Ministers' with portfolio responsibilities within the Department of State Growth. Minister Groom's State Growth portfolio within this department include such matters as trade and economic growth, vocational training and education, defense, population strategy and many other aspects of growth as in growing the state economy.
The Minister for Infrastructure's portfolio responsibilities within the overarching Department of State Growth include transport, roads, bridges and other infrastructure on state owned roads and property.
Other minister's have other portfolio matters within the Department of State Growth including arts, information, technology and innovation and a host of other ministerial and portfolio matters.
It is quite confusing having a Minister for State Growth and a Department of State Growth with several ministers aligned to the department. I hope that I have been able to clarify this a little."

Yes! Thank you. That's perfectly clear now. The left hand is usually called the left hand but the right hand can also be called the left hand when the left hand is not the right hand. And the Minister responsible for the left and right hand is not necessarily responsible for the left hand if the left hand is under the control of another Minister who uses the right hand…. Or the left hand is right if the other hand is left behind with the right hand….Oh, forget it!

No wonder we aren't growing.

Walk this way ...

Heart Foundation Tas CEO Graeme Lynch on the benefits of joining a walking group

For whatever reason, we don't walk as much as we used to. Which is a shame, because it turns out that regular walking is one of the factors behind living a long and healthy life.

In fact, more than half of Australia's adults aren't sufficiently active to gain health benefits. We live in a country that has one of the highest rates of obesity, diabetes and heart disease in the world. To make matters worse, more than one-quarter of our kids are overweight, which doesn't bode well for the next generation either. We're simply not being active enough.

Since its formation in 1959, one of the cornerstones of the Heart Foundation has been our work on preventing heart disease (and also related conditions such as diabetes and stroke). After all, prevention is infinitely better than the cure, particularly if you consider what can happen when something goes wrong with our body's most important muscle.

It was nearly a decade ago, back in 2008, that the Tasmanian Heart Foundation joined a growing national effort to get people back on their feet, as it became increasingly apparent that many of us weren't getting the day-to-day physical activity we needed. Walking had long been shown to provide immense benefits to one's heart health so we began inviting people to get involved.

Tasmanians from Kettering to Currie and most places in between answered the call, forming groups with names like Best Foot Forward, the Walkie Talkies, and the Ringaroamers. There's a group of women on the west coast – who clearly prefer to do their walking in the evenings – known as the Ladies of the Night. Last count, more than one-thousand Tasmanians belong to a Heart Foundation walking group.

According to the very people who participate in these regular walks, the benefits are more than just feeling healthier. Who'd have thought that taking a brisk walk around the neighbourhood or along the beach with a bunch of mates could be fun?

My team and I work so hard on matters of the heart. We're constantly advocating for better heart health policy. We raise money to fund lifesaving research into heart disease. For people who've experienced ill heart health we're there too, providing support and advice on how to look after themselves in the aftermath of a scary experience.

But time and time again, during staff meetings and chats with health professionals alike, the conversation comes back to prevention as being the most important facet of the heart disease problem facing our country.

I urge you to get a little more active. Do what we all know we should: walk to work, or at least to the bus stop. Take the stairs. Walk around the block at lunch time. Ride your bike more.

But if you really want to have a laugh at the same time you brush up your health, join a Heart Foundation walking group. You'll be welcome with open arms.

For more information and to find a group near you, visit walking.heartfoundation.org.au.

Swansea Golf Club Report Sat

22nd July 2017

Max Hall celebrated his birthday by winning the Monthly Medal, a great effort from the evergreen veteran of many years of playing golf. His gross score was well below his age and his net score was sufficient to finish on top of the leaders' list. Congratulations Max! Jack and Pat Hardcastle flew in on an early flight from Melbourne to finish in second and third position with scores of net 58 and 59 respectively. Val Kemp, Sally Siepen, Ricky Wright and Rick Dance had excellent rounds with scores equal with or under their handicaps. It is pleasing to note that five ladies finished among the top ten place getters.

Nearest to the pin winners were Ricky Wright and Ross Brokate.
