ACTIVITY NOTICE EAST TASMANIA AIRBORNE MAGNETIC AND RADIOMETRIC SURVEY

There will be a Helicopter based in Swansea from 23 May until Mid June. It will be conducting a low level Airborne survey for Geoscience Australia and Mineral Resources Tasmania.

Geoscience Australia, in collaboration with Mineral Resources Tasmania, will be carrying out an airborne magnetic and radiometric survey in eastern Tasmania during 2022. The survey is part of the Australian Government's Exploring for the Future program, which is committed to supporting a strong economy, resilient society and sustainable environment for the benefit of Australians. At its heart, the program is about contributing to a sustainable, long-term future for Australia through an improved understanding of the nation's mineral, energy and groundwater resource potential.

Why is this research important?

This scientific research is a continuation of similar surveys that have covered northern Tasmania and most of the Australian mainland. The survey will enhance understanding of landforms, geology and natural resources of the region, which will support future resource and land management decision-making.

Survey method

Light aircraft are fitted with instruments to map variations in the Earth's magnetic field and naturally occurring radioelement abundance. The instruments are passive which mean they do not transmit any signal. Airborne surveys avoid the need for any ground disturbance.

What you may see

A small fixed wing aircraft or helicopter will make a single pass approximately 80 m above the ground, along flight lines 200 m apart. If you have any concerns with this activity please contact Mineral Resources Tasmania.

HAVE YOUR SAY ON LOBBYING IN TASMANIA

The Integrity Commission is currently seeking input into a review of Tasmania's lobbying system and how it might be improved. The Commission is interested to hear from people in the Greater Oyster Bay community.

Lobbying is the process of seeking to influence government decision making on behalf of special interests. It can be a healthy part of a democracy that ensures different views of the community are represented in policy, legislation and budgeting, but can also be a source of distrust in government when more powerful interests are seen to have the most influence. Oversight of lobbying through tools such as a publicly available lobbyist register, can be a way of increasing transparency and accountability. Integrity Commission Chief Commissioner Greg Melick said, 'We are interested to hear people's experiences of lobbying and their thoughts on Tasmania's current model of lobbying oversight.'

'You may be a lobbyist or someone who has been lobbied, or have been affected by public decision-making that resulted from lobbying. We are hoping to hear from anyone who has an interest in this vital democratic process.'

The existing lobbying oversight system for Tasmania was established in 2009 and is administered by the Department of Premier and Cabinet. This system includes the Tasmanian Lobbyist Register and a Lobbying Code of Conduct.

'It is the perfect time for this review, as responsibility for administering the existing Tasmanian Lobbyist Register and the associated Lobbying Code of Conduct will transfer from the Department of Premier and Cabinet to the Integrity Commission in July this year,' Mr Melick said.

'The Tasmanian community needs to have confidence that public administration and government decisions are made fairly, transparently, and in the public interest. The submissions we receive will inform recommendations to improve accountability of lobbying practices and associated decision-making within Tasmania.'

'Effective regulation increases confidence that no particular individuals or groups exercise undue influence over government.'

The submission process has been designed for broad participation across Tasmania. A consultation paper has been published that summarises the relevant issues. It sits alongside a full research report for those interested in understanding how lobbying, and lobbying regulation, works in Tasmania, across Australia, and internationally. The Integrity Commission has also provided a submission form with discussion prompts to guide submissions from the community.

Submissions can be made from now until 30 June, 2022. More information on how you can 'Have your Say' can be found at the Commission's website:

www.integrity.tas.gov.au

LABOR OR LIB? IT'S SO CLOSE IN LYONS

Labor holds Lyons by only a few hundred votes and may go either way as counting of late postal votes and the like are counted. No mention of a recount but it may be required if the result is closer still.
