The Swansea Community Hub
The Swansea Community & Men's Shed
The Swansea Community Re-use Shop
Opening Sunday 7th March 2021

It has been several months since the last up-date. It was hoped the hub would be well and truly operational by now but many issues have delayed this process. At last we can say we will be open from Sunday 7th March. The official opening date will be advised as soon as this can be arranged bearing in mind some Federal MPs from Canberra wish to attend.

The S24 Committee has been working long and hard to make sure everything is in place before opening its doors. The hub is now an incorporated entity.

There are some tool that have been on order for the last eight months still to arrive but the bulk of the tools have been received and assembled. They are being tested and tagged to ensure they are safe to use. Work benches have been constructed and The Shed is now looking like a workshop. The Committee has applied for and received a $7,000 grant to install solar panels on the roof to help defray ongoing costs.

It is envisaged the Community and Men's Shed will have men only days, ladies only days, school pupil days, and days when any member can attend.

At the open day in August, 15 ladies registered their interest in becoming members. The Committee would like any men and women who are interested in being part of the Shed to attend the open day on Sunday 7th March. Anybody who would like to look around the complex is welcome to attend. We would also like to hear people's views on how they would like to see the Hub evolve.

The Community Re-use Shop is now well stocked and rearing to open it's doors. It is a treasure trove of bargains.

The Community Room is available to the public to hire for meetings and events or for members to carry out craft sessions or whatever other activity they might propose, or just drop in for a coffee and a chat.

The committee looks forward to welcoming you all and showing you around The Swansea Community Hub Sunday 7th March between 10.00am and 2.00pm.

Biosecurity boost for Tasmania's wine industry

Tasmanian wines are highly regarded not only around Australia but around the world and it is crucial that we support the industry as it continues to grow.

I am pleased to announce that the industry will now benefit from a $50,000 grant from Biosecurity Tasmania for enhanced biosecurity preparedness.

Wine Tasmania will receive the grant to implement a biosecurity emergency response program with a focus on controlling the potential problem of phylloxera, an unwanted insect not currently in Tasmania that feeds on the roots of grapevines with infestations eventually causing them to die.

The grant program complements Biosecurity Tasmania's strategy to keep Tasmania free from unwanted pests and diseases and includes detailed information for the wine tourism sector on how best to deal with them.

It also includes vineyard signage, educational videos, workshops and scenario planning to help growers and members of the public understand the importance of biosecurity.

Wine continues to play a key role in Tasmania's agri-food sector, with a farm gate value of $49 million for wine grapes and a processed and packed value of $143 million in 2018-19.

The Tasmanian wine brand is strong and there are a lot of very engaged and supportive Tasmanian wine consumers, both in Tasmania and interstate, who have shown their strong support by seeking out and buying wines directly from their favourite producers.

I thank Wine Tasmania and Biosecurity Tasmania for the vital work they are doing to ensure Tasmanian wine continues to tantalise taste buds around the world.

LABOR CONCERNS OVER POLICE NUMBERS

Making sure regional police stations are staffed full time would be a top priority of a Tasmanian Labor Government.

Speaking at the Police Association of Tasmania conference in mid-February, Labor member for Lyons Rebecca White MP said Labor would make the resourcing of police on the frontline throughout Tasmania a priority.

"Labor is committed to giving police the tools they need to perform their jobs and protect the community," Ms White said.

"We would ensure that rural and regional police stations are always staffed by putting another officer into the community when someone takes leave or has days off. This makes sure our police are supported to do their job while also helping to help keep all Tasmanians safe.

"Everyday our police and other emergency service workers see things that many of us can't imagine and we need to look after them."

Labor Member for Lyons Jen Butler MP said the mental health and well-being of police was an important issue for Labor. "We must ensure our police officers have the support they need," Ms Butler said.

"Labor will support improved physical and emotional wellbeing programs across all emergency services, including with on-the-job mental health checks and improved workplace training and support."

Ms Butler said a Labor Government would also fund urgently needed police resources, including the training of three general duties dogs, one each for the North, South and Western districts at a cost of just over $1million.

"Our rural and regional police are vital to the community and we must ensure all Tasmanians can feel safe and protected wherever they live.
