ANZAC DAY 2023

It was 108 years after the fateful landing on the Gallipoli Peninsular, that spawned the ANZAC legend, the Swansea residents and visitors assembled at the Cenotaph to conduct a Dawn Service, to commemorate all those who have fallen, served and are still serving in the armed services of Australia and New Zealand. The President of the Swansea RSL, Gary Lewis introduced the MC for the service Mr Noel Stanley, who conducted the dawn service, which included the Last Post, a 2-minute silence and The Rouse (Reveille).

This was followed by the Gunfire Breakfast at the RSL sub-branch.

Later in the morning, those who were partaking in the parade along Franklin Street, assembled at the Ampol service station for a 10.30am march to the Cenotaph where at 11 am a memorial service was held.

The Master of Ceremonies for the service was Group Captain Dr George Merridew AM (Retd). He led the gathering in "The Prayer of Remembrance" followed by "The Recessional". Dr Merridew then introduced Major Bill Costin (Retd) Vice-President of the Swansea RSL Sub-Branch who read "Memories of the Somme" a poem by Mick Colliss.

The ANZAC Day address was then given by Gary Lewis which was followed by the laying of wreaths at the Cenotaph.

Dr Merridew then read "The ANZAC Requiem" which was followed by the 'Ode of Remembrance', The Last Post and minutes Silence and The Rouse.

The attendees then adjointed to the RSL for Lunch & refreshments.

A 55-YEAR LONG TASMANIAN RESPIRATORY HEALTH STUDY SEARCHES FOR ITS' ORIGINAL 1968 PARTICIPANTS

Back in 1968, 8,583 Tasmanian school children were recruited into what is now the world's largest and longest running study of asthma and respiratory health - The Tasmanian Longitudinal Health Study (TAHS). One participant has a vivid recollection of - "standing in line at Punchbowl Primary School in my bloomers and singlet blowing into a tube which looked like a hairdryer."

The study has followed these participants from the age of 7, via health questionnaires and lung function tests, for 55 years. So far, the data collected has informed over 80 research articles and 140 conference presentations, influencing new scientific knowledge, clinical practice and Australian policy around respiratory health. The study has just begun its latest follow-up, which critical for investigating the impact of previous health and environmental factors on the later life respiratory health of their participants, now aged around 60 years old.

Keeping track of more than 8,000 children as they grow up, have families of their own, and age is no easy task. Many participants have moved interstate or overseas. In previous decades, the study team utilised individual matching with Electoral rolls, Marriage registries, and Medicare databases to find participants at each follow-up stage of the study. At one time, Aurora Energy even printed a message from the TAHS on their power bills, encouraging participants in Tasmania to get in touch.

Nowadays, things are significantly more challenging. Privacy laws, important for protecting individual safety and liberties, prevent the study team from utilising Medicare or any other Commonwealth databases to find their original participants. With the rise in email and phone scams, people are understandably less willing to engage when we reach out to them. "We respect our participants' privacy and confidentiality, and we understand why people must be cautious when they are contacted. We always work within the bounds of research ethics and try to balance our respect for privacy with the need to trace our participants for this important health research."- Professor Shyamali Dharmage, TAHS Principal Investigator. To reach as many participants as possible for the latest follow-up, the study team is exploring modern strategies for tracking down their participants, including Social Media tiles on local community Facebook pages and stories in local newspapers.

"We are really counting on local Tasmanian media in all its' forms to spread the word and help find our participants so the study can maintain its standard as world-class research into respiratory health".— Prof Dharmage.

Visit the Transport website for a detour map and additional information.

SLOW DOWN FOR ROAD WORKERS

Everyday hundreds of our road workers risk their safety on Tasmanian roads. If you ignore speed limits or traffic instructions for road works, you are putting lives at risk.

Please, SLOW DOWN FOR ROAD WORKERS.

Your speed is our safety.
