SEASONAL WORKERS RETURN TO SWANSEA BACKPACKERS

A group of 50 workers aged between 23-53 has returned to the area to work on a 3 month employment contract.

The workers are employed on the Federal Government's PALM (Pacific Australia Labour Mobility) Scheme which allows eligible Australian businesses to hire workers from 9 Pacific Islands and Timor-Leste to help fill labour gaps in rural and regional Australia for agriculture when there are not enough local workers available. It gives employers access to a pool of reliable, productive workers who are then able to develop their work skills, experience another culture and send income home.

The present group consists of 17 workers from Timor-Leste and 33 workers from Vanuatu including 14 females and 36 males. They are accommodated at the Swansea Backpackers and have exclusive use of the property for the duration of the program. Workers depart on two buses for work each week-nj day at 6am. They are self-catering and are rostered in teams to ensure the communal areas are kept in a clean and tidy state.

Feel free to call into the hostel at any time to chat to the workers

MAST

MARINE and SAFETY TASMANIA

TAKE CARE BUYING SECOND-HAND BOATS

Every year at Agfest, MAST has the privilege of engaging with thousands of Tasmania's boating enthusiasts from around the State.

This year, one of the highlights for MAST was the significant interest in our showcased vessel, the "half-boat" Monica.

We cut the boat in half to clearly demonstrate the potential pitfalls associated with older fibreglass boats.

The Monica, a small, old fibreglass half-cab vessel with which many Tasmanians are familiar, serves as a prime example.

Older boats may conceal structural issues such as rotten transoms, bulkheads, and floor timbers, underscoring the need for a thorough inspection when considering the purchase of a pre-owned vessel.

We also discussed buoyancy requirements with numerous visitors at our stall. We were pleased to learn that our demonstrations influenced at least four individuals to reconsider purchasing older second-hand boats.

Many boats can be retrofitted with buoyancy, but it is important to have a clear understanding of the process.

Our consistent advice to prospective boat buyers is to take someone with you who is knowledgeable about boats.

Last year, MAST introduced new legislation to improve the transfer and registration process for recreational vessels. The changes centred around ensuring the vessel is not unsafe.

Older vessels may have been modified since their construction and could pose safety risks due to alterations such as engine upgrades, added fixtures, and increased weight from equipment like pot haulers, larger fuel tanks and auxiliary motors.

Under the new legislation, both the buyer and the seller are required to declare that the boat is not unsafe when registering or selling a vessel. Both the seller and purchaser must notify MAST of the transfer within 14 days. -

Another highlight at Agfest was MAST's display of the latest range of EVDS (Electronic Visual Distress Signals) devices.

These devices, available at any of our Boat Safe partners, are an alternative to the two traditional red and orange handheld flares, provided a GPS-enabled EPIRB and a VHF radio are also carried, and offer several advantages:

- Emitting a white light that meets specific intensity requirements.
- Capable of automatic signalling S-O-S for at least 3-5 times per minute for 6 hours.
- Equipped with an independent power source (batteries).
- Floating with the lens surface at or above the surface of the water.
- Featuring a waterproof switch.

A significant benefit for the Tasmanian boating community is the ability to test EVDS before going out on the water – which you can't do with the traditional flare.

While MAST continues its annual collection and disposal of outdated flares, this incurs a significant cost of approximately $30,000 annually.

With the increasing adoption of EVDS, the use of traditional flares is expected to diminish over time.

RAISING THE BAR FOR VMR

A $5,000 grant from TasPorts to, Swansea based, Freycinet Volunteer Marine Rescue Association has provided the opportunity to significantly raise the standard of personal safety for members of the Association.

A temporary rescue vessel was acquired by the Association late last year after it's former vessel, built to recreational standards in 2004, was severely restricted when assessed against contemporary commercial vessel standards. The replacement vessel is a rigid hull inflatable boat with much lower sides than the previous vessel. That increased the inherent risk of a crew member falling overboard.

TasPorts came to the rescue through a timely round of their Community Grants Program. In addition to the distress beacon carried on the rescue vessel each crew member will now be kitted out with a hands-free personal communicator and a Personal Locator Beacon (PLB) carried in and on an new inflatable lifejacket.

The PLB is vital should any crew member become separated from the rescue vessel. The Ocean Signal PLB3 introduces new technology where emergency signals from the beacon are detected not only by satellites as usual, but also by Automatic Identification System (AIS) receivers which may be on other vessels in the area or shore-based; for example, one in Swansea and another in Coles Bay. The shore stations feed data to the Marine Traffic website and subsequently to the Marine Traffic phone app. The PLB is activated automatically when the lifejacket is inflated. It then acknowledges when the distress signal has been received by a satellite. Off the water, battery charge and test results can be monitored on a mobile phone.

The Milo communicators are a simpler device that allow clear communication between crew members without the need to shout over ambient noise from wind, waves and engines.

Freycinet VMR Commander Col Barney says: "At $190 for lifejacket, $400 for a Milo Communicator and $800 for a PLB3, which has a five year battery life, three sets of this equipment don't come cheaply, but they certainly enhance on-water safety for our volunteers. That's a level of safety that has been made possible through the TasPorts grant."

reunite with them in Tasmania, which will enable her to continue caring for Rita.

Rita's condition requires constant care, which includes arranging transport to medical appointments, managing prescriptions, and handling financial matters.

"Before coming here, I didn't know much about dementia beyond forgetfulness."

"I quickly learned that being a full-time carer involves managing every aspect of my mother's life," Grace said.

One of the biggest challenges Grace faces is navigating the Australian healthcare system, particularly as a newcomer to the country.

"Navigating these systems is overwhelming, but I have found tremendous support from Carer Gateway."

Carer Gateway has provided Grace with crucial resources and support including free counselling, mental health workshops and peer support groups. Particularly helpful has been Carer Gateway's coaching service, which offers practical guidance and emotional support.

Through free coaching sessions, Grace has learned to break down her tasks into manageable steps and has received practical advice on organising her mother's care.

"Carer Gateway has been a lifeline."

"My coach was thorough and encouraging. She helped me create actionable steps, which made everything less overwhelming."

"She has been my accountability partner and has been instrumental in helping me focus and stay on track," Grace explains.

Grace also benefits from peer support groups facilitated by Carer Gateway, where she connects with other carers, shares experiences, and gains insights that help her in her role. She now volunteers a couple of hours every month to lead her local carers group.

"Knowing I have a support through Carer Gateway gives me peace of mind. It's comforting to share and hear stories from others in similar situations."

Despite the challenges of caring, Grace cherishes the moments she spends with her mother.

"Most days, mum is mobile, has an appetite, and enjoys her choir and Sunday outings. These moments are precious," Grace reflects.

"Being a carer can be lonely and isolating sometimes. So, knowing that there is help out there, one number I can call just gives me peace of mind."

Grace's journey as a carer is a testament to her love and dedication. With the support of Carer Gateway, she continues to provide her mother with the best possible care.

If you are in a similar situation and need help with your caring role, contact Carer Gateway's Tassie team at Care2Serve. Call 1800 422 737 (and select 1 from the menu) or visit the website at www.carergateway.gov.au

GRACE'S JOURNEY: A STORY OF DEDICATION AND RESILIENCE

Grace Shimomura, a single mother from the Philippines, moved to Launceston, Tasmania, in 2022 to care for her ageing mother, Rita, not knowing the full extent of what dementia care entailed.

Grace's journey into caring was sudden. Rita had suffered a fall and was struggling to live alone after the death of her second husband in 2021. Rita, an 82-year-old war widow, suffers from vascular dementia, Alzheimer's, and Lewy body dementia (LBD).

Due to her mother's deteriorating health, Grace had to abruptly leave her career and teenage children in the Philippines. She is now working on their migration documents to
