STAYING COMFORTABLE AT MARILLAC HOUSE

The St Vincent de Paul Society's (Vinnie's) Marillac House in Hobart is helping regional Tasmanians stay in an ideal central location while a loved one receives treatment at the Royal Hobart Hospital and other Hobart - based medical facilities.

Marillac House is a place for people and their families to stay at an affordable price, with access to a range of amenities including free laundry facilities, a large kitchen, a shared dining room, bathrooms and comfortable living spaces.

Ronald Lowry is from Miandetta and he says staying at Marillac House has made it much easier for him to feel supported and comfortable while his wife undergoes treatment at the hospital.

"If we were staying in a motel or something, we would really struggle financially, so staying at Marillac House is really tremendous," he said.

"We can bring family members down too, which is great because we can all be in the same place. That really helps you survive the situation because you have family members and friends around."

Marillac House Hobart is located on the corner of Murray Street and Bathurst Street, placing it in the centre of the Hobart CBD and only a five-minute walk away from the Royal Hobart Hospital and a range of other medical services.

"People love the location," Manager of Marillac House Hobart Sarah Thomas said.

"There is a chemist right behind us, the hospitals and outpatient clinics are only a five-minute walk away and Woolworths is on the way, so everything is nearby."

Residents are able to comfortably stay in their rooms or spend time in the public areas of the house where they can meet other residents.

"Everybody else that is here is in the same situation as you," Ms Thomas said. "So, people swap stories and help people find their way around Hobart and get used to staying here."

Marillac House Hobart has been operated by the Society since early 2024, while Marillac House Launceston has been operating at a similarly convenient central location in the north for almost two decades.

You can contact Marillac House Hobart by calling (03) 6118 2944 or emailing MarillacHouseHobart@vinniestas.org.au. Further details of the Marillac House services are also online at vinniestas.org.au.

"I highly recommend staying here, and all my family members agree," Mr Lowry said.

"I couldn't speak highly enough about it."

DISCOVER SWANSEA COURTHOUSE ARTS

Swansea Courthouse Arts is the renamed East Coast Community Arts Initiative. It is a non-profit community run arts group that bases many of its events and activities in the State heritage listed Swansea Courthouse. The group takes pride in fostering vibrant, inclusive arts activities and actively seeks and co-ordinates arts events from the community and external bodies. More information is available on the recently launched website: www.swansecourthouse.com.au where you can find out about becoming a member and upcoming events.

Keith Breheny, President, Swansea Courthouse Arts, says "After years of dedication and hard work by the Swansea Courthouse Management Committee, we are very pleased to be involved with the launch of the Swansea Courthouse website. There is no doubt that the website will result in greater awareness and use of this special building – the oldest Rural Municipal Council building in Australia. In addition to information about Swansea Courthouse Arts, the web site contains information about the building's history, the refurbished heritage facilities and the opportunities for the Swansea community to come and enjoy this wonderful public asset. The site includes a floor plan and a description of the rooms available for your next events such as workshops, performances, meetings and any functions that require a first-class venue with community friendly facilities. Swansea Courthouse Arts is delighted to share the Courthouse website with the Courthouse Management Committee as the community's go-to site for the future."

Swansea Courthouse Arts invites you to become a member of Swansea's vibrant arts community by registering your interest through the website.

TACKLE SERRATED TUSSOCK BEFORE IT TAKES OVER

Serrated tussock (Nassella trichotoma) is a perennial (long-lived) tussock-forming grass, considered one of the worst weeds in Australia. An aggressively invasive grass, it outcompetes native grasses, is unpalatable to almost all stock, and capable of reducing pasture productivity by up to 95%.

Serrated tussock is mainly spread by wind. Flower heads break off whole, and may be carried by the wind, or water or machinery, for many kilometres. It has been estimated that one hectare of serrated tussock infestation can produce 500 million seeds every year.

Positive identification

Similar to several of Tasmania's native tussock grasses (Poa species), it is frequently overlooked until it begins to flower in late spring, after which a large number of purple florets give it a distinctly purple appearance.

Seedlings may appear at any time of year, but most germinate in autumn or winter. Young plants are upright and densely tufted with tightly in-rolled leaves. Leaf leaves are bright green and the leaf sheaths (which wrap around the base of the leaves) are a whitish colour, and more slender and closely packed than those seen in the native tussocks. The leaves feel rough (or serrated) if the finger and thumb are drawn down the blade.

Winter is the time to inspect for tussock

Council is aware of several properties across Glamorgan Spring Bay with local infestations and, although not yet widespread, it may have already made its way onto your land.

In frost-prone areas, the green tussocks are bleached a golden yellow to white colour by frost during late autumn and winter. The change in colour makes the plants easier to spot in a paddock, making now a good time to do a survey of your land.

Serrated tussock is a costly weed to have on your property, especially when it becomes established.

Controlling serrated tussock before the plant goes to seed in spring is critical to prevent further spread, lost productivity and increased control requirements.

Weed management – it's your responsibility

It is your responsibility to control serrated tussock on your land. Serrated tussock is a declared weed under Tasmania's Weed Management Act 1999. Failure to remove it from your property could result in legal action. Council will be undertaking property inspections for serrated tussock in the coming months so now is the time inspect your property and make a treatment plan.

If you are uncertain as to whether a plant you have found is serrated tussock, collect a sample of it in a sealed bag, take note of the location, and contact [Biosecurity Tasmania](mailto:Biosecurity Tasmania) (1300 368 550 or Biosecurity.Tasmania@nre.tas.gov.au) or Council (03 6256 4777 or tegan.jux@freycinet.tas.gov.au)

Let's control serrated tussock in Glamorgan Spring Bay before it gets out of control.
